

MIOT treats Zanzibar Sheha

Released from a local community health centre in the West African nation early in August, sheha (sheha) returned to her home in Zanzibar to receive treatment.

MIOT

MIOT is a community health centre in Zanzibar, Tanzania. It provides a range of services to the local population, including primary health care, family planning, and reproductive health services. The centre is staffed by health workers and community health workers who provide care to patients in a friendly and accessible environment. MIOT is a member of the International Network of Community Health Centres (INCHC) and is committed to providing high-quality, affordable care to all who seek it.

MIOT is a community health centre in Zanzibar, Tanzania. It provides a range of services to the local population, including primary health care, family planning, and reproductive health services. The centre is staffed by health workers and community health workers who provide care to patients in a friendly and accessible environment. MIOT is a member of the International Network of Community Health Centres (INCHC) and is committed to providing high-quality, affordable care to all who seek it.

MIOT is a community health centre in Zanzibar, Tanzania. It provides a range of services to the local population, including primary health care, family planning, and reproductive health services. The centre is staffed by health workers and community health workers who provide care to patients in a friendly and accessible environment. MIOT is a member of the International Network of Community Health Centres (INCHC) and is committed to providing high-quality, affordable care to all who seek it.

MIOT is a community health centre in Zanzibar, Tanzania. It provides a range of services to the local population, including primary health care, family planning, and reproductive health services. The centre is staffed by health workers and community health workers who provide care to patients in a friendly and accessible environment. MIOT is a member of the International Network of Community Health Centres (INCHC) and is committed to providing high-quality, affordable care to all who seek it.

MIOT is a community health centre in Zanzibar, Tanzania. It provides a range of services to the local population, including primary health care, family planning, and reproductive health services. The centre is staffed by health workers and community health workers who provide care to patients in a friendly and accessible environment. MIOT is a member of the International Network of Community Health Centres (INCHC) and is committed to providing high-quality, affordable care to all who seek it.